Centennial

One hundred years ago Maine became a State of the Union and this year the event is to be officially observed with a great celebration, the principal features of which will take place at Portland from June 28th to July 5.

While Maine is only a century old as a State, in reality the territory was one of the first settled sections of North America. A colony had been established on its shores sixteen years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620. The Maine coast, barring of course, possible discovery by the early Norsemen, was first visited, it is believed, by John Cabot, the English explorer, in 1498, only six years after the discovery of the new world by Columbus. In 1501 the Portuguese explorer, Corte-Real, came to Maine, and in 1524 Verrazano, an Italian, sailing under a French commission, cruised along the coast. In 1525 a Spaniard, Gomez discovered and named the Penobscot River, Rio de las Gomas, or Stag River, and in 1526 the French explorer Thetvet visited the territory and returned to Europe with a story of Norumbega, Maine's mythical city.

It was in 1565 that the renowned son of Great Britain, Sir John Hawkins came to Maine and two years later three survivors of his second expedition crossed its interior, the first white men to visit any part of the present State away from the coast line. In 1602 Captain Bartholomew Grouse explored its southwestern shore and in 1603 Captain Martin Pring, a British trader, discovered Casco Bay on which is now located the City of Portland.

The premier attempt at settlement was made in 1604 by Sieur de Monts, the famous French explorer, who established the first colony in what is now the United States, north of Florida, within the borders of the present State of Maine, on Neutral Island in the St. Croix River, near what is now the city of Calais. The renowned Champlain was a member of the party and cruised along the Maine coast as far east as the Kennebec River, naming Mt. Desert Island. After a terrible year in which the majority of the party died from exposure and disease the colony was obliged to give up its existence.

In 1607 the first English colony was established at Popham, at the mouth of the Kennebec River, by George Popham. This with the colony at James town, Virginia, founded the same year, were the first English settlements on the Atlantic coast. The little group, however, after the death of its founder, was obliged to abandon the site. The colony, however, established one notable record for it constructed, during its brief career, the Virginia, the first sailing ship to be built in North America. In 1613 the French Jesuits organized a mission on Mount Desert Island and in 1614 the coast of Maine was visited by Captain John Smith, of Pocahontas fame, who made the first reliable map of it and named many of its principal points, including Cape Elizabeth. He was the first to apply the name New England to this Northeastern section of the United States.

Only three years after the landing of the Pilgrims, Captain Christopher Levett established a trading post on one of the islands now within the limits of Portland, and in 1632 the foundations of the present city were established by George Cheever and Richard Tucker. Previous to this, however, in 1628, settlements had been made along the shores of Casco Bay on territory now within the limits of Brunswick and Cape Elizabeth.

In 1614 occurred another notable event in the history of America when Ferdinand Gorges established the first chartered city in the United States under the name of Georgiana. This is the town of York.

The year 1775 was a memorable one in the annals of Maine. In June the first naval battle of the Revolutionary War, the first naval engagement of the present United States, and the first time a British flag was struck to America on land or sea, occurred off Maine, Maine, when the British Warship Argenta was captured by the American ship, Unity. The latter was commanded by Captain Jeremiah O'Brien, and was often called the "Father of the American Navy", and for his notable achievement he was given a vote of thanks by Congress.

Another historic event of that year was the march of Benedict Arnold and his army across Maine in an attempt to capture the city of Quebec.

MEMORIAL DAY AT BETHEL

Memorial Day exercises were held according to the order arranged.

At 1:30 P. M., Veterans, Spanish War Veterans, Geo. A. Munde Post American Legion, Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief Corps and Boy Scouts marched from I. O. O. F. Hall to the Monument, where the pupils and teachers from "The Brick" joined. After singing "America" and listening to Lincoln's Gettysburg Address which was given by Louis Van Den Kerckhoven in a very pleasing manner the orders and pupils led by the Bethel band, marched to Odeon Hall where the address for the afternoon was given by Prof. Marriner of Hebron Academy. He was introduced with fitting remarks by Prof. Hancock, although a Bethel audience needed no introduction, and it is safe to say the interesting and inspiring address given by Prof. Marriner will not be forgotten soon by all privileged to attend. The Bethel band gave a selection and a solo was rendered by Dr. Wright accompanied by his daughter, Miss Vivian Wright, at the piano.

In the forenoon the Spanish War Veterans and American Legion were busy decorating the graves of comrades in the different cemeteries, after which a good delegation went to East Bethel accompanied by the band where exercises were held and a fine program given by the school children and an interesting talk by Rev. Mr. Wheaton.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Events of Interest From Washington

By J. E. Jones

POLITICS THE MAIN INTEREST

Most of the administrative branches of the Federal government are headed over heels in politics—and Congress has a hard time to keep going because most of its members are plumb dilly over the political situation. The only diversion is the performance of Honorable Josephus Daniels and his sea-faring men who are holding post mortems over the part the Navy performed in the war. The chief interest in their quarrels surrounds the telling of secrets that had better never have been told. Mr. Bryan has a habit of disagreeing with the Democratic party leaders that is enlivening, and the Republican candidates have made one another envious by their states of the sizes of their campaign funds. The pre-convention disclosures are proof to the old saw about politics making strange bedfellows.

BREAKING THE RAILROAD JAM

The Interstate Commerce Commission has been active in its efforts to put the railroads back "on the map." A few days ago plans were inaugurated for re-routing thousands of loaded cars that had accumulated in the principal railroad centers over the most direct routes, regardless of costs or the references of individual consignees. These vigorous measures furnish promise of breaking the jam that has been preventing operating the railroads of the country in a healthful manner.

POLITICS AND THE RAILROADS

For a dozen years at least the railroads of the country have been regarded among the assets of the politicians, and the one who could block the administrative plans of the greatest number of railroad lines was considered the most successful "statesman." When the Government itself finally got the roads tied into a hard knot through public operation, it was decided that it was high time to give the owners of the lines a new opportunity to make a real business out of railroading. Howard Elliott, representing the rail executives, has pointed out to the Interstate Commerce Commission the fact that freight rates have been raised 71 per cent in England; 140 per cent in France; 100 per cent in Belgium; 40 to 100 per cent in Italy; 70 to 140 per cent in Holland; 200 per cent in Sweden; and 150 per cent in Norway. The increase in the United States has been about 40 per cent, as against increased operating expenses of fully 100 per cent. The railroads in asking an average increase of 38 per cent in freight rates state that the amount will enable them to pay the additional billion dollars that has already been granted in wages to the railroad operators.

While the railroads are thus trying to catch up through the Interstate Commerce Commission the trainmen are pressing through the Railroad Labor Board, which is another Government institution, for an additional billion dollars increase in their wages. Doubtless many railroad employees are underpaid, and there will necessarily be some wage increases.

A CHANCE TO DRAW THE "DEAD LINE"

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the Railroad Labor Board apparently have the opportunity to check the everlasting circle of increased costs, and to act in the interests of the public in an effective manner, by establishing a definite and more or less permanent basis of freight rates, and wages; first, by raising the rates to a point that will make railroading a good business proposition for investors; and then by an adjustment of wages that will be equitable. There are many people who are hoping that these two Federal agencies will firmly and courageously meet the issue, and furnish an example for other industrial activities of the country in adjusting their affairs to a very definite basis.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES
For a good many years we have been hearing about the benefits of the "metric system." I have been reading all about it in a bunch of literature furnished by both sides—and my first reaction is that weights and measures are "well propagandized."

The fundamental unit of the metric system is the meter, the unit of length. It sounds well! A meter is 39.37 inches. Fractions always afford a bum start, but that's "metric," and the metric measurement is vouched for as being as "correct" as the wife of Lot.

Ever since British diplomacy taught us how to get "free tolls" at the Panama Canal, and "freedom for democracy" on European battlefields we have been prone to compare our own standards with those of Britain. In weights and measures the British gallon is approximately 20 per cent larger and the British bushel three per cent larger than those in the United States. A ton in British weight is 2,240 pounds avoirdupois. There are "arabes" in Egypt; "arshines" in Russia; "candy" in India; "catty" in China; "franks" in Spain; "rotilles" in Syria; and "sums" in Japan. And all these represent units of weight.

The metric system is being urged because it can be applied internationally, just as we adopt Hungarian rhapsodies and German symphonies for our musical instruments. That's where skill gets in its work. But when it comes to using the new scheme vocally there are snags, and it is a big undertaking to make American substitutes for the British, whose quarts were good enough before; or a

PLAN FOR MARKETING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

The first activity to be undertaken by the Home Directorate of the State Chamber of Commerce and Agricultural League, of which Mrs. Florence Brooks Whitehouse of Portland is the Chairman, will be the marketing of the agricultural products and handicraft of rural home makers.

This work is to be inaugurated during the Maine Centennial Exposition to be staged at the Portland Exposition Building from June 26 to July 5, inclusive, under the auspices of the State Chamber of Commerce and Agricultural League.

All the industries and resources of the State of Maine will be portrayed in exhibits during the Centennial Exposition. As a part of the exhibit, there will be a booth for "home industries." This will give a splendid opportunity to display samples of canned goods, butter, cheese, maple sugar, candy, rugs, woven goods, antique furniture, in fact any products of home makers.

Thousands of visitors from outside of the State will view the exhibit, will wish to purchase, and, if the goods are satisfactory, will desire to re-order. The plan is to find out what fine quality products are for sale, to list them, and the people wishing to dispose of them, to have these women ship a sample collection to be sold at the Exposition, to furnish the purchasers with the names and addresses of the producers, and to start the home marketing out in a big way.

In order to secure the information required, a questionnaire has been prepared and placed in the hands of each county director of the Home Directorate and is available for every woman in Maine anxious to participate in the Centennial Exposition and find a market for the products of her skill.

BIG FIRE AT SO. PARIS

Mason Manufacturing Co. Suffers Big Loss of Lumber

South Paris had its most destructive fire in some years Monday afternoon, when an area of piles of sawed lumber in the yard of the Mason Manufacturing Co. was burned. The fire started beside the railroad, about in the middle of the long rows of piles of lumber stacked for seasoning, which extends from near the factory down to the river bank. It was discovered a few minutes after the passage of the 3:30 passenger train, and was one of several fires which were burning beside the track within a mile or so south of the village. The alarm was given by the whistle of the Mason Manufacturing Co. shortly before four o'clock.

The lumber piles were soon burning furiously, and as there was almost a solid block of lumber piles extending through the yard, and a breeze was blowing from the location of the blaze diagonally across the yard, the situation looked dangerous, not only for the lumber but for the factory as well, and even for other property in the village.

Fortunately the breeze moderated somewhat after a while. The firemen, though hampered by lack of water pressure, made a gallant fight, and wisely confined their efforts to holding the blaze from spreading up or across the yard. In a southerly direction it simply burned itself out, cleaning up the lumber until it reached a gap in the pile where the yard narrows up by the river bank.

The Norway fire department was called for to assist, and arrived about an hour after the fire was started, and laid two lines of hose from hydrants on the other side of the railroad.

A large crowd of spectators from the two towns gathered, mainly on the grounds of the Barnham & Morrill Co. across the railroad, where a good view of the blaze was to be had. Even there it was so hot that they were driven back some distance from the bank, and how the firemen stood it so near the blaze, even with such protection as they could get from doors and other heat-shields, was a mystery.

An hour and a half of work made it evident that the blaze was under control and its spread checked.

The lumber destroyed was both pine and hardwood. The Democrat has not been able to get even an approximate estimate of its amount, but the loss will be many thousands of dollars. The factory is also likely to be more or less disturbed in its operation by the loss of so much lumber.

While the blaze looked most dangerous, a call was sent to Lewiston for help, but no flat car was available on which an engine could be loaded. A call was then made on Portland, and one of the assistant fire chiefs arrived here by motor car a little before six o'clock. At the time he left Portland he said they were loading apparatus, but before they could get away from the city the fire was under control here, and the call was canceled.

While the fire was burning, larger or smaller fires were also burning along the railroad at several points between Lewiston Junction and South Paris, and track crews were sent out to look after them. No extensive damage was done by them. Oxford Democrat.

NEW PUBLIC SCALES NEEDED AT BETHEL

The town of Bethel seems to be in a pretty bad predicament without any scales large enough to drive a team or truck onto for weighing purposes.

This is going to make it a pretty hard proposition for the people dealing in hay, cattle, coal and grain, owing to the fact that the scales used in the past have been closed. It is hoped that something can be done to remedy this in the near future.

HISTORY AND INTERESTING FEATURES OF MAINE

Falmouth, now the city of Portland, also was bombarded and destroyed in 1775 by a British fleet under Mowatt.

In 1779 Castine, whose career forms one of the most romantic pages in American history, was captured by the British, and it was in this engagement that the famous Sir John Moore, the subject of that immortal poem, "The Burial of Sir John Moore," received his "baptism of fire." In that battle Paul Revere who only a few years before had made his memorable ride, led the Massachusetts detachment of troops.

In 1803, Commodore Edward Preble, of Portland, commanded the American Squadron at Tripoli which defeated the Barbary pirates and upon his return to the United States was received with great distinction and given a vote of thanks and awarded a medal by Congress.

Hundreds of thousands have read Longfellow's immortal poem "My Lost Youth," in which he describes his youth in the city of Portland and in which he has made famous the naval battle between the American warship "Enterprize" and the British warship "Boxer" fought off the eastern end of Casco Bay. In this bloody engagement the captains of the two ships were killed in action and both were buried in the old Eastern Cemetery at Portland, their graves, side by side, being visited annually by tourists from every section of the world.

The year 1814 was another notable one in the history of the State. During it the present city of Bangor was captured by the British and held as a part of Canadian territory for about four years. The second capture of Castine by the British also occurred, and a day or two later was fought the remarkable battle of Hampden, much overlooked by historians, and in which both American and British soldiers were killed, and the present cities of Bangor and Belfast captured.

On March 15th, 1820, Maine officially became a separate State of the Union, up to this time it having been a part of Massachusetts and known as the District of Maine.

In 1829 occurred one of the most notable events in the history of the United States and in which Maine was the great factor around which revolved the principal incidents. This was the American War which threatened hostilities between Great Britain and the United States. Large numbers of troops were raised and immense sums of money appropriated by both nations for the expected conflict, the commanding officer for the United States being the renowned Gen. Winfield Scott. Actual bloodshed was averted, however, and the cause of all the trouble, the Northeastern boundary of Maine, was adjusted by a treaty negotiated by Daniel Webster, Secretary of State, and Lord Ashburton, representing Great Britain. Maine was the pioneer which blazed the path of National prohibition when in 1851 the State adopted an amendment to its Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

In all of the wars, from the Revolutionary down to the World War, Maine has more than done its share in the cause of right and its record along this line is one of the most glorious pages in its history.

The world owes much to the sons and daughters of Maine. It has given it some of the most remarkable men and women in history. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, America's greatest poet, was born at Portland. Sir Hiram S. Maxim, inventor of the Maxim Machine Gun, first saw the light of day at Bangorville. His equally famous brother, Hudson Maxim, inventor of smokeless powder, is a native of Orneville. Lillian Nordica, one of the world's greatest singers, was born at Farmington, and Artemus Ward, the renowned humorist, at Waterford.

Franklin Simmons and Benjamin Paul Akers, two of the world's greatest sculptors, were born respectively at Webster and Westbrook. Rev. Elijah Kellogg, whose name will always live as the author of "Spartacus to the Gladiators," and other orations, as well as the famous Elm Island stories for boys, was born at Portland. Maxine Elliott, the renowned actress, and Gertrude Elliott, her talented sister, now the wife of Sir J. Forbes Robertson, are natives of Rockland. Many world renowned authors also were born in Maine, among them being John S. C. Abbot, the celebrated historian, at Brunswick; Elizabeth Akers Allen, author of "Rock me to Sleep Mother" and other famous poems, at Strong; Rebecca Sophia Clark, famous writer of children's stories, under the name of plume of Sophia May, at Norridgewock; Sewall Ford, creator of the "Rhorly and Torchy" stories, at Lovell; James Otis Kaler, known to hundreds of thousands of boy readers under the pen name of James Otis, at Winterport; Sarah Payson Parton, one of the best known women writers of the last century, under the pen name of Fannie Fern, at Portland; Harriet Prescott Spofford, famous writer, at Calais; Sarah Orne Jewett, at South Berwick; Holman F. Day, popular novelist, at Vassalboro and Jacob Abbot, author of the Rollo books, at Hallowell.

Few people are aware of the fact that Edgar Wilson Nye, known to the world as "Bill Nye," the famous humorist, was born at Shirley, near Moosehead Lake. Two of the greatest publishers of today are natives of Maine. They are Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal and other widely known publications, born at Portland; and Frank A. Munsey, publisher of Munsey's Magazine, New York Herald and other leading publications, born at Mercer, George Palmer Putnam, founder of the publishing house of George Putnam Sons first saw the light of day at Brunswick.

Many of America's greatest characters in history were born in Maine. Among these are Hannibal Hamlin, Vice President of the United States with Lincoln, born at Paris; Sir William Pepperell, conqueror of Louisburg, at Kittery; Sir William Phipps, first Royal Governor of Massachusetts, first American on whom Great Britain conferred knighthood and the conqueror of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, at Woolwich; Commodore Edward Preble, "Hero of Tripoli," at Portland; General Joshua L. Chamberlain, "Hero of Little Roundtop," at Gettysburg, and the man who received the actual surrender of General Lee at Appomattox, at Brewer; General Oliver O. Howard, famous Civil War commander, at Leeds; Gen. Henry T. Merriam, inventor of the Merriam Infantry Park, and renowned strategist, at Houlton; Gen. James A. Hall, noted artilleryman who opened the battle of Gettysburg, at Damariscotta; and Dorothea Lynde Dix, famed for her work for the insane, and as head of the female nurses during the Civil War, at Hampden.

Some of the most notable leaders in America's public life also were Maine-born, among them Thomas Brackett Reed, renowned parliamentarian and former speaker of Congress, at Portland; John D. Long, former Secretary of the Navy and Governor of Massachusetts, at Buckfield; Rufus King, twice United States Minister to Great Britain and one of the principals in the drafting of the American Constitution, at Seabrook; William P. Frye, American diplomat and former acting president of the United States, at Lewiston; Lot M. Morrill, Secretary of the Treasury, U. S. Senator and Governor of Maine, at Belgrade; Melville W. Fuller, former Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, at Augusta; William Gregory Thomas, American diplomat, minister to Norway and Sweden and founder of the remarkable Maine Colony of New Sweden, at Portland; Nelson Dingley and Eugene Hale, widely known statesmen, born respectively at Durham and Turner. John A. Andrew, Massachusetts' noted Civil War Governor, at Windham; Hugh McCulloch, famous financier and former Secretary of the Treasury, born at Kennebunk; Sergeant Smith Prentiss, one of America's most famous orators, and said to be the greatest extemporaneous speaker that ever lived, at Portland; General Neal Dow, Father of Prohibition and leader in public life, at Portland; Annie Louisa Carter, world renowned singer, at Wayne; Nathaniel Parker Willis, at one time America's most popular essayist, at Portland; Sumner I. Kimball, father of the great coast life-saving service of the United States, at Lebanon.

Other Maine-born men who have achieved almost a world-wide reputation are Noah Brooks, author and friend of Lincoln, a native of Castine; Cyrus Hamlin, first president of Roberts College, Constantinople, Waterford; Walter M. Brackett, America's greatest painter of fish, Unity; Eastman Johnson, America's renowned portrait painter, Lovell; Professor Dudley Allen Sargent, one of the best known directors of physical training in the United States, Belfast; George Otis Smith, director of the U. S. Geological Survey, Haddam; John F. Stevens, former Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal, West Gardiner; Richard Hawley Tucker, widely known astronomer and director of the great Lick Observatory at Mt. Hamilton, California, Wiscasset; John Washburn, President of the Washburn-Crosby Flour Company at Minneapolis, Hallowell; Walter M. Lowrey, chocolate manufacturer, Sebree, and many others almost equally as well known.

Some of the State's distinguished citizens, past and present, who while not born in Maine, achieved their success while a resident of it. Among these was Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, who came of Maine stock. His home at the time of his death was on Eagle Island, Casco Bay, in the town of Harpswell. Formerly he was for several years successively a resident of the cities of Portland and South Portland and the town of Fryeburg. Other notables in this class are James G. Blaine, former Secretary of State and Republican nominee for President, who lived at Augusta; General Henry Knox, first Secretary of War of the United States and Washington's Chief of Staff whose home was at Thomaston; William Pitt Fessenden, former Secretary of the Treasury under Lincoln and famous American statesman, a lifelong resident of Portland; Emma Emma and Emilio de Gogorza, world renowned singers, who both live at Bath; Professor Donald B. MacMillan, noted Arctic explorer, who makes his home at Freeport, and very many others.

Not a large State in area as compared with many in the Union, it is, however, of immense size when compared with those in its immediate vicinity. For instance, it practically equals in territory all of the other New England States combined and one of its sixteen counties, Aroostook, is almost as large as the State of Massachusetts. The total area of Maine is 33,040 square miles, or 19,132,400 acres. Of this land area is 25,995 square miles and water area 3,145. The State is 302 miles in length and 285 in width.

Maine has about 1,300 islands and about 1,600 lakes. Among the former Mt. Desert Island, one of the largest on the Atlantic Coast, contains 60,000 acres and is noted for its wonderful scenery. On it is located the only National Park east of the Mississippi, Lafayette National Park. One of Maine's lakes, Moosehead, is the largest in New England and has an area of 120 square miles and is about 37 miles in length. There are about 5,000 rivers and streams in the State, its rivers and lakes comprising one-tenth of its total area.

Maine's coast line is one of the most remarkable in the entire world as well as one of the most beautiful. While in a straight line, from its most westerly to its most easterly point, it measures only about 278 miles, because of its almost numberless bays and indentations, the actual coast line of the State reaches the astounding figure of about 2,496 miles.

TUNEFUL JUNE

After June comes, there is music everywhere. There is music in the running brooks, music in the harvest fields, and music in the woodlands. Old Mother Nature outdoes herself when June is here. There are roses and strawberries and cherries, and the garden is filled with good things to eat.

June has often been called the month of roses. He has also been called the month of weddings. Perhaps he is the fabled Cupid, who, armed with bow and arrows, shot his love-laden darts into the bosoms of both gods and men. The name of June has the meaning of young and vigorous.

A tune-fellow is June. He embodies the spirit of poetry, and he is ever singing some lulling melody. The birds are his cheery messengers. And so it is that June's thirty days come and go like the fashion that James Whitcomb Riley described so truly:

"Pee-wees singin', to express
My opinion's second class,
Tut you'll hear 'em more or less;
Sapsucks gittin' down to biz,
Meddlin' out the lonesomeness;

"Mr. Bluejay, full o' sass,
In them baseball clothes o' his,
Sportin' round the orchard jes'
Like he owned the premises!"

Mr. Riley has penned a charming poem, "Knee-Deep in June," from which the foregoing quotation was taken. He knows "swallows skootin' past," and has heard "Bob-white raise and whiz," and has gazed upon the "clouds o' gold and white and blue—month a man kin really like—June, you know, I'm talkin' o'!" In some other bit of verse is the sober-headed statement:

"Then let us one and all
Be contented with our lot,
For June is here this morning
And the sun is shining hot.
Oh! let us fill our hearts up
With the glory of the day,
And banish every doubt
And care and sorrow far away."

The best month of all the year is June. He is radiant, he bubbles over with good humor, and the clothes he wears are like the rainbow in the sky. Let us ever try to be as cheerful as June. Though the days be dull and dreary, let us ever be able to sing:

"It is rose-time, it is June-time,
Hear the lark, a-down the dell,
Singing sweet, in tuneful measures,
Summer songs he loves so well.
All the woods are full of verdure,
All the lands are rich in bloom;
It is rose time, it is June-time!
South winds bring the sweet perfume."

The birth-stone for June is the agate, which symbolizes long life and health, at the best way to gain long life and health is to be thoroughly like June. The people who pattern after June are the people who live long and joyously.

JUNE JOYS

June is one of the busiest months in the year for the housewife, particularly if she is a mother and lives on the

Mrs. Elsie Tebbets and children of Durham were in town, Sunday.

Mrs. W. H. Crockett was called to Sumner, Thursday, by the serious illness of her brother, N. M. Varney.

Miss Martha Buck was at Gorham, N. H., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. King Bartlett and Sidney were at North Leeds over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fiske entertained company from away, Sunday.

Mrs. C. E. Stovell, Mrs. Edwin Rowe and Mrs. A. R. Stowell were at Bryant's Pond, recently.

farm, but I believe the busiest among us should break away from the work on some rare June day and go to the woods or fields. There is no balm like this for healing over-strained nerves, no matter if you have to serve only bread and milk for supper. Remember that your outing is for the welfare of the family as well as yourself. Do not go alone if there is a child to be had for a companion.

Last year the writer took ten little girls for a day in a shady grove while the June rush of gardening and preserving and chicken-raising was at its height. It gave a new zest to the humdrum duties for many days. If some piece of housework was left undone we have all forgotten it now, but a little girl will never forget a picnic. We women get into the habit of thinking we have not time for such things, when really we have twenty-four hours every day and could enjoy at least a part of it if we only made up our minds to do so.

COOL AIR IN CELLAR MAY DO WORK OF ICE

Keeping food cool is an essential part of summer housekeeping. With ice and a well-made ice chest, difficulties are few, but without them other methods are necessary. We must have a cool place for storage if we are to have good meals made up of foods properly kept and appetizingly served. When ice is not available we can use devices which make cool air—cold water and evaporating water do the work of ice.

We can usually count upon finding cool air in the cellar, and it is valuable indeed if clean and well ventilated. But one housewife immediately says, "I am too busy to use my time carrying the food up and down those cellar steps." Every housewife is, but how about a dumb waiter on which the food could be sent to and from the cellar? A shaft made of boards and plaster and extending from the cellar through the roof by way of the kitchen or pantry is another device which has proved useful in some parts of the country for using the cool air of the cellar. Wire or perforated shelves are fitted into the shaft and a door opens from it. As the air in the upper part of the shaft grows warmer the cold air from the cellar is drawn up and the constant upward movement of cellar air cools the food on the shelves.

A miniature iceless refrigerator, useful where only small amounts of food need to be cooled, is made by inverting an unglazed earthenware flowerpot in a dish of water. Food may be kept cool also by placing the dish in cold water and changing the water as it becomes warm.

To keep food cool when ice is not available takes ingenuity and care. But others have done it, so why can not you?

MOTHER AND CHILDREN GRATEFUL

In East Boston, Mass., at 23 Lamson street a contented family of three children and the mother live, daily thanking in silence the kind neighbor who helped them when they were sick.

Mrs. Nellie Woodford is the mother and she writes the following letter to Dr. F. True & Co.: "Having heard about your medicine from my neighbors and druggist, I wondered if your Dr. True's Elixir wasn't what I needed. I am a hard working woman, working six hours every day for the Penn Realty Trust Company in Boston. In doing this work I use a lot of strength. Besides this looking after my home and the care of my three children were me out. I guess my nerves got out of kilter. I worried a lot, and seemed to be tired easy. I lost my appetite. I was overtaken with dizzy spells, my eyes got blurred, and I soon found I had to stay home from work. I didn't do any housework, but the rest didn't do any good.

"I always had one special doctor for myself and the children, but he was out of town when I was sick. I took medicine from the druggist which my friends brought in, but nothing did any good. My bowels were out of order. My breath bad, and I was shaky all over. Worst of all the terrible head-aches came. It seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought in to me by a neighbor.

"After a short time I began to cheer up and be myself again. My bowels acted like magic, and fixed her up only after two days. Signs of worms were: constipation, hardened full belly, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, and occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, even heave and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nostrils, and short dry coughs, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever. If your children show any of these symptoms, start giving Dr. True's Elixir. The Family Laxative and Worm Expeller at once. It has done wonders for children and grownups since 1851. AT ALL DEALERS.

What's become of the prejudice against automobiles because they frightened the horses

NOW cars are everywhere. The horses have gotten used to them—and so has everybody else. Think of it! This year the American people will spend nearly a billion dollars on tires alone.

Tires are one of the biggest items on the car owner's bills.

Hardly a Saturday, when you motorists drop in to "tune up" for a Sunday trip, that one or more of you doesn't tell us something of value to our business. Sooner or later it comes back to you in Service.

Service is what the car owners of this community are looking for nowadays.

And especially the small car owners, who put service first in figuring their motor-ing expenditures.

Just because a man has a moderate-price car is no reason why he should get any less service out of his tires.

We believe that the man with the small car is entitled to just as good tire service as the man with the big car—and both are entitled to the best tire service they can get.

That's why we represent U. S. Tires in this community.

And why more car owners—large and small—are coming to us every day for U. S. Tires.

Come in and talk to us about tires. We're here to help you get the kind of tires you want.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel:
In sandy or hilly country, wherever the going is apt to be heavy—The U. S. Nobby.
For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco.
For front wheels—The U. S. Plain.
For best results—everywhere—U. S. Royal Cords.

MR. PERHAM'S STATEMENT
To the Republicans of Oxford County:
In reply to inquiries from interested parties who have the right to know, I wish to make the following statement:
I believe that the people have a right to know the attitude of candidates on all important questions. We all realize that the business of the country must be done by large combinations of capital in order to do it economically and efficiently. I believe that these corporations should be run for the benefit of the State and the people, and not the few. I believe that the State and the people should have a voice in the management of these corporations. No one object to capital having liberal returns for every dollar honestly invested.
I believe that our natural resources should be developed for the business interests of the State of Maine and through this development will come benefit to all the people of the State.
I believe that conditions are about ripe for great business development in our State. The high cost of labor in our mines, the high cost of transportation and the uncertainty of a regular supply of coal for industrial purposes, even at exorbitant prices, makes our unlimited and constant supply of electric power, under proper development and reasonable rates, look good to many factors. If we keep a steady hand with our electric power, the business will come to the power, instead of the power going out of the State to the business, and I believe that every possible safeguard should be employed to secure this end.
I believe that it is our duty to look after the interests of our State, just as I believe that it is the duty of the people to look after their own interests, which are always identical with the best interest of the State, and to see that men are nominated for office who represent their interests and will safeguard them in our legislature.
I have no quarrel with our corporate interests, which are now as always, seeking to have men nominated for office who represent them and can be relied upon to defend them and to vote for their interest. This is the constant thing for them to do from a purely business standpoint; and it is just as constant for the farmers, the merchants, the mechanics, the mill workers and, in fact, the men who are doing the actual work of the State to seek the nomination of men who represent them, and can be depended on to defend them and to vote for their interests. This is but a common sense business proposition on both sides, and if the common people who have an overwhelming majority of the votes, allow the other fellows to nominate the candidates in June, we must vote for them in September, and we shall have no right to complain as there is no one but ourselves to blame for it.
Personal friendship, local pride, and the "Good Fellow" proposition are all ways worked over time to make the voter forget his own interests and his duty to his party and his State in nominating candidates for office.
I am a farmer and represent the average citizen of Oxford County. I am under no obligation to any interest except the interest and welfare of the common people, which must always depend on the business prosperity of our County and State.
To this end I pledge my best and on decided efforts.
Yours very truly,
GEORGE W. PERHAM

Red blood

Rich, red blood coursing through our veins is a sure sign of a good digestion. Unless your stomach, liver and other digestive organs are working promptly and thoroughly, the blood cannot assimilate all the nourishment from your food; your energy and vitality are not renewed.

Eat all you want, only avoid too much pastry and rich foods, but be sure to take plenty of time to chew slowly and well. Chewing is the first part of the process of digestion. A teaspoonful of "L.F." Atwood's Medicine occasionally, will purge your system of impurities, and allow only nutritious elements to enter the blood. It will keep your liver active and you will get the full benefit of your food.

Keep a bottle of "L.F." always on hand. It is absolutely harmless under all conditions, and will help young and old alike. It has been a household remedy in many families for three generations. Your dealer sells it for 50c a bottle. If you have never tried it get a bottle today. "L.F." Medicine Co., Portland, Maine.

POEMS WORTH READING

IN ANTICIPATION OF "OLD HOME WEEK"

There's a good deal of talk, one way and another,
About the children a-coming home
To stay a week with us, me and mother,
An' I do really hope they'll come.

I don't most gener'ly do much talking;
When mother speaks up, why I give way;
But I think a sight, as I set here rock-ing,
As much as them that has more to say.

It'll cost, no doubt, an' take off the butter,
But we always raise our own garden
stuff,
An' we hav'nt never been apt to mutter,
So long as we're sure we shall have enough.

And I make no doubt we shall, for whether
The season's dry, or the season's wet,
I never know all crops fail together,
There's always seed time an' harvest yet.

St I hope the children will all be coming,
When the corn is tasseled, and wheat
an' rye

Wave in the wind, an' the bees a-bum-ming
Make you feel glad without reasoning why.

They'll be some changed, I expect, some older;
And like as not they'll see change in me;

But mother—why, many a time I've told her She's younger than what she used to be.

An' spryer, why once, though I say
it that should'n't,
She kinder made gods of her churn
and tub;

My means was such, that to help it I couldn't,
Till I got forehanded, an' she joined the club.

An' then she come up as if she had wings,
Why, besides the Bible, she reads
books so,

That now she knows—mother knows
more things
Than even the minister used to know.

I never have been much on book-knowledge,
Not so much as I ought to have been,
may be;

But I sent my boys and girls to college,
An' that's my part, as far's I see.

An' my heart is warm with the love
that's burning
The same as her's, for our children
dear;

I couldn't feel more, if I had more learning,
Nor sorrow deeper, as time draws near,

For them that I know will come back never,
Some ships most founder, some sail
ers down,

And some have gone to sleep forever,
With only strangers to lay 'em down.

But I try to think, as I set here rock-
ing,
Of only the living, the cheerful ones,
The hearty words, an' the lively talking.

When they all get here, our girls an'
boys
An' when they come, an' we greet 'em
An' I set still amongst all the stir, another.

An' ere 'em talking an' hearing mother,
I know I shall be proud of her

A DREAM OF HOME
Last night I dreamed of the old home,
The home of my boyhood days,
Where the sunshine of life shone brightest.

Warning my heart with its rays;
Where children's fond hopes and visions
Came and went like the sun and the dew,

And after one glimpse at their beauty
Like home they have passed from my view.

Last night I dreamed of the garden,
And the house with the vine-covered eaves,
And I saw once again the clusters

Of grapes hidden deep 'neath the leaves;

Ah, how like the hopes of my boyhood,
The plans for a future so grand,—
They hung 'neath the leaves in ripe clusters,

But far from the reach of my hand.
I dreamed of the trees and the door-
yard,

The stable, the woodshed, the well,
Each spot brings some fond recollection,
Some story of childhood to tell;
And I pause in my dreamland vision,
For tears of remorse fill my eyes,

And I long for the freedom of childhood,
But to my longing no answer replies.

Last night I dreamed of my mother,
She was standing alone in the door,
Her face looked sad and careworn,
I missed the bright smile of yore;

Perhaps she was hoping and longing—
Longing for days that are past,
Hoping for a brighter tomorrow,
O'er which no shadows are cast.

To-day I still dream of the old home,
I still see my dear mother's face,
I stand 'neath the dear old home roof,
Clasped in her fond embrace;

Gone are the shadows of sorrow,
Nothing but joy can remain,
For I am once more in the old home,
A boy with my mother again.

SAY SOMETHING GOOD
Pick out the folks you like the least and watch 'em for a while;

They never waste a kindly word, they never waste a smile;
They criticize their fellowmen at every chance they get,

They never found a human just to suit their fancy yet.

From them I guess you'd learn some things, if they were pointed out—
Some things what every one of us should know a lot about.

When someone "knocks" a brother,
pass around the loving cup—
Say something good about him if you have to make it up.

It's safe to say that every man God made holds trace of good
That he would fain exhibit to his fellows if he could;

The kindly deeds in many a soul are hibernating there,
Awaiting the encouragement of other souls that dare

To show the best that's in them; and a universal move
Would start the whole world running in a hopeful, helpful groove.

Say something sweet to paralyze the
"knocker" on the spot—
Speak kindly to his victim if you know the man or not.

The eyes that peek and peer to find the worst a brother holds,
The tongue that speaks in bitterness,
that frots and fumes and scolds;

The hands that bruise the fallen, though their strength was made to raise The weaklings who have stumbled at the parting of the ways—

All these should be forgiven, for they "know not what they do";
Their hindrance makes a greater work
for wiser ones like you.

No, when they scourge a wretched one who's drained an' bitter cup,
Say something good about him if you
have to make it up.

Wanted—500 Girls to Give Up Toy Poms And Teas for Worth While Substitute

Around the fireplace at the College in New York where Salvation Army lassies are trained for their exacting work. Inset—Lieutenant-Colonel Margaret Nevill, Secretary of the Woman's Social Department of the Salvation Army.

NO languishing in bed until ten every morning, with novel and a box of chocolates; no shopping tours and matinees; no tea dances; no nightly cafe-tours. Hard work. Devotion to the sick, the troubled, the disheartened. Young woman, how do you fancy this program of existence? Five hundred young women with energy and a desire to lead lives of usefulness are sought by the Salvation Army throughout the United States. As lassies they will spread comfort and happiness.

"The work of the Salvation Army has grown beyond our fondest hopes; we need capable young women to carry on our service to humanity," said Mrs. Colonel Margaret Nevill, veteran Salvationist. She is at the head of all activities for women and children east of the Mississippi River. Her offices are at National Headquarters, No. 122, West Fourteenth street, New York. "Do you know," she asked, "there are more than 1,000,000 idle women in the United States? The ambitions of these idlers have not gone beyond the stage of boubons and the latest novel. A large proportion of these would welcome, I feel sure, a chance to lead lives of usefulness if they knew the opportunity. The Salvation Army now offers them every sort of useful work—nursing in the Army's hospitals, infant hygiene in the children's homes, relief and rescue work in the slums.

"Two thousand unfortunate women are cared for annually in Salvation Army rescue homes. Young women are needed to help these girls take care of their nameless babies and lead useful Christian lives. In our nurseries and kindred institutions every year 50,000 children are cared for. What an opportunity for the girl who loves sweet, chubby toddlers! I know of no more happy girls than our Salvation Army lassies. The trumpet has sounded. Young woman, the Army needs you!"

Dedicate Salvation Hall in Tokyo

THE TAMBOURINE GIRL

THE Doughnut Girl of wartime has doffed her khaki and donned the familiar blue. Today she is serving just as valiantly as ever as The Tambourine Girl of the city slums, the angel of the tenements and the guardian of the poor. Instead of the doughboy, the poverty-stricken, the distressed, the sick and the unfortunate know her now and call her blessed. Ah, yes, she's still the Girl. In peace as well as in war!

Maine also has many lofty mountains, among them famous Katahdin, one mile in height, and renowned for its rugged beauty. The entire area of the State is exceptionally high only about one-third of its territory in the South, and in the valley of the St. John River in the North, being below an altitude of 800 feet.

Many great rivers rise within its borders, or flow across it, among them being the mighty St. John whose source is in the northern part of the State and is one of America's great waterways. The longest river wholly within the State is the Penobscot with a length of approximately 300 miles. The Kennebec River is about 150 miles long.

Maine has another interesting feature and that is the fact that it is exactly midway between the equator and the North Pole and a monument in the town of Perry marks the exact halfway point.

No State in the Union has a greater variety of wonderful scenery than Maine, combining as it does, rugged seacoast, towering mountains, superb lakes, limitless forests, beautiful rivers and charming agricultural country. It is the paradise of the seeker after health and recreation.

Industrially Maine is one of the prominent States of the Union and it also takes high rank in agriculture and commerce. Its mighty rivers are now furnishing immense waterpower for hundreds of industries and only a very small amount of this available power has been used. It is one of the leaders in lumbering, 75% of its land area being covered with a forest growth, the principal woods being pine, fir, spruce and hemlock with an abundance of cedar, beech, birch, hard maple and black and white ash. In fishing it stands almost preeminent being located in close proximity to some of the greatest fishing grounds in the world. Maine lobsters and clams are in a class by themselves.

In agriculture Maine has one district which has made it famous all over the country. This is Aroostook County, one of the greatest potato growing sections in the United States. The State's sweet corn is the world's standard for quality, and Maine canned sweet corn is recognized as the best in every market. It also produces an immense crop of hay, and Maine apples are known everywhere for their excellence. Another widely known product of the State is blueberries, the canning of which is one of its important industries.

In the manufacture of paper and wood pulp, based on the amount of capital invested and the value of the product, Maine stands first in the States of the Union today. It also does an enormous business in the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, as well as in leather products. The finest snowshoes, canoes and woods equipment in the world are made in Maine. The canning of fish, vegetables, fruits, berries constitutes a tremendous industry and the State is internationally famed for its shipbuilding. The manufacture of lime is important.

Hundreds of different articles are made in Maine, in the manufacture of many of which the state leads. The list of even the principal ones is too long to enumerate in this brief article. It is only necessary to say that Maine has a wonderful future in industry and agriculture because of its location so close to the great centers of population, its splendid system of transportation to these centers as well as throughout the State, and the fact that it possesses such a bountiful supply of the raw materials for the manufacture of many staple articles. The State also has the finest of transatlantic steamship service to many parts of the world through the port of Portland, as well as two trans-continental railroad systems.

Certain it is that Maine whose past has been a glorious one has an equally splendid outlook for the future. This is not only true in commerce and agriculture, but it is becoming one of the greatest summer resort sections in the Union. Last year it is estimated that 700,000 tourists visited the State, leaving approximately $30,000,000 and this year it is expected that the Centennial Celebration will greatly increase this number and make it the greatest season Maine has known up to the present time. One of the great factors in this connection has been its wonderful system of new State highways which is growing rapidly each year and which now traverse nearly every section. These are of the highest type of construction and are being splendidly maintained.

In conclusion it may be interesting to quote from an address delivered by Hon. Thomas B. Reed many years ago, and which contained this toast to his native State:

"Here's to the State of Maine, settled mostly by the blood of England, but always preferring liberty to ancestry; a strong, old democratic State, yet among the first to help give liberty to the slave. May her future be as noble as her past. Here's to the State of Maine, the land of the bluest skies, the greenest earth, the richest air, the strongest, and, what is better, the sturdiest men, the fairest, and what is best of all, the truest women under the sun."

decimeter of denim for ten yards in the language of the United States.

Doubtless, the metric system has many strong points; but to a lot of people it vibrates a good deal like the "international" patois or polyglots of the cosmopolitans and they sound like something that should be suppressed.

RECKLESS YOUTH

The War Department is literally raking the country with a fine tooth comb in an attempt to deliver discharge certificates to 7,959 service men who were in the late war.

Liberty bonds to the value of $127, 169 belonging to 2,543 ex-service men have been returned to Washington by the Post Office Department because of incorrect addresses.

The Service and Information Branch of the War Department has been a regular messenger bureau for former soldiers. It has found them jobs, looked after their travel pay and bonuses, and straightened out things in thousands of ways. "The United States has provided every kind of service that can be suggested for the ex-service men," remarked an official of the War Department, "and if there is anything due any former soldier all he has to do is to let us know about it." In order to make the work more effective twenty-five field men are working in different parts of the country, and local organizations of citizens are being formed in the different communities to "finish up the job" that was started when Uncle Sam there has been in the long in April, 1917.

Perhaps it is not surprising that out of four million men 7,959 should neglect getting their discharge papers; but the percentage is nevertheless rather startling, since it may indicate what part of humanity there is that "would forget that it had a nose on the face unless it was fastened on."

Reckless youth forgets its "discharge papers" and the Liberty bonds that it has paid for, and likely this is the same small percentage of youth that talks the bolshhevik stuff.

Meanwhile the Government insists that the boys that bore its colors shall have their titles read clear, and it wants citizens to help in locating these reckless young chaps who do not realize the importance of these matters in their future. Citizens who can be helpful in this work will be rewarded by the satisfaction that they are still "doing their bit" towards our boys, and it is always worth the trouble to help one of "our boys," even though he is the personification of the "don't give a dang" sort—for that is only a temporary ailment, and it deserves sympathetic treatment while it lasts.

IMMORTALITY AT THE PUBLIC CRIB

One of the big problems in Washington concerns the getting rid of the surplus war workers, who apparently regard their positions as "related to immortality." Members of Congress are constantly using their influence to "save the scraps." There is an insistent demand throughout the country for rigid economy, and it is a popular belief that Washington should set the example in "paring down" expenses.

SILENCE

By George Wilson Jennings
The grandest conditions in nature are the most silent and imperceptible. The shallow brook bubbles in its passage, and is heard by every one, but the arrival of the seasons is silent and unnoticed. The storm rages and alarms, but the temper is quickly exhausted and its effects are partial and soon remedied, but the dew, though gentle and unheard, is immense in quantity and the very life of the largest portion of the earth. These are only a few pictures of the quiet and silent workings of Nature.

I have often told my friends that all the misfortunes of men spring from their not knowing how to live quietly, and make more of the home life, for respect of person and steadiness of features are at all times marks of a good and liberal education. It is the quiet and silent people who accomplish much. Be silent and safe for silence never betrays you.

The wife of one of our favorite authors has from childhood been a person of very few words, and still she possesses a host of friends, not alone from her husband's popularity, but from her personal magnetism. It has been said of her that she is a difficult person to understand, being one of very few words, especially when she attends social events or lectures to her friends referring in an idle way to others. At such a time her silence is decidedly marked. Recently the writer asked her why she was inclined to be so very quiet, or in other words silent. Her reply was: "There are but few people in this age who have what might be called the gift of speech, who understand the value of silence."

It was George Eliot who once said that "Speech is often barren; but silence also does not necessarily brood over a full nest. Your still soul, blinking at you without remarks may all the while be sitting on one added nest egg."

and when it takes to cackling, will have nothing to announce but that added confusion.

If mankind wants to be sure of having nothing to regret in after life, let him keep constantly in mind the adage of the ancient Greek philosopher: "I have often regretted my speech; but never my silence." It would be well to remember the injunction of Polonius: "Lend every one thine ear, but few thy voice." Silence, under certain conditions, is more eloquent than speech.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Thou shalt honor thy city and keep its laws.

Remember thy cleaning day and keep it wholly.

Thou shalt love and cherish thy children and provide for them decent homes and playgrounds.

Thou shalt not keep thy windows closed day or night.

Thou shalt keep in order thy alley, thy back-yard, thy hall and stairway.

Thou shalt not kill thy neighbors' bodies with poisonous air, nor their souls with bad companions.

Thou shalt not let the wicked fly live. Thou shalt not steal thy children's right to happiness from them.

Thou shalt bear witness against thy neighbor's rubbish heap.

Thou shalt covet all the air and sunshine thou canst obtain.

The greatest menace to health in a city is the influential citizen who insists on his right to live like a dog and be a menace and a nuisance to all his neighbors. -Bulletin of the Indiana State Board of Health.
